

Tarnhollow Brand Guidelines

Version 3.2, October 2026. Owner: Head of Communications.

1. How to use this guide

Tarnhollow makes Tarnhollow Landing, a platform that helps HR teams welcome new hires. This guide applies to everyone who writes or designs for us: staff, agencies, freelancers and AI tools.

Each numbered clause is a rule. Reviewers cite these clause numbers, so please quote them when you ask about a decision. Worked examples and channel notes are there to help, and aren't rules themselves.

2. Voice and tone

We sound like a calm, knowledgeable colleague. People read us while they are busy, so we get to the point and we never talk down to them.

2.1 Write in plain English. Prefer short sentences and everyday words, and explain any specialist term the first time it appears.

2.2 Stay calm and helpful. Do not use fear, pressure or false urgency to persuade the reader.

2.3 On LinkedIn, sound like a thoughtful colleague: warm, measured and conversational, with no shouting, capital-letter emphasis or hard selling.

2.4 Use contractions such as we're and you'll so the voice stays conversational.

> Instead of: Leverage our solution to unlock onboarding synergies.
> Write: Use Tarnhollow Landing to get new hires set up faster.

> Instead of: Act now or lose your best people!
> Write: A good first week helps people settle in.

3. Terminology

Consistent words build trust. These rules apply to every channel and to every agency and tool that writes for us.

3.1 Never use unprovable superlatives: best-in-class, world-leading, market-leading or revolutionary.

3.2 The product is Tarnhollow Landing. Never use its retired name, Tarnhollow Onramp.

3.3 Say new hire, never newbie or fresher.

3.4 Never use contractions in published copy.

> Instead of: Our world-leading platform
> Write: Our platform

> Instead of: Welcome your newbies
> Write: Welcome your new hires

4. Claims and facts

Our credibility rests on being accurate. If a claim isn't on the approved fact sheet, it doesn't go out.

4.1 Every statistic must come from the approved fact sheet and match it exactly.

4.2 Never publish a statistic after its valid-until date.

4.3 Do not promise outcomes. Avoid guarantees and absolute claims such as guaranteed, always or 100%.

4.4 Do not compare Tarnhollow with a named competitor without sign-off from Legal.

4.5 Never mention unreleased products or internal codenames.

> Instead of: Tarnhollow Landing halves your onboarding time.
> Write: Customers cut onboarding time by 38% on average.

5. Required elements

Some content must carry specific wording. Reviewers check for these lines before anything is approved.

5.1 Every LinkedIn post and ad must include this line: Results vary by organisation.

5.2 Every blog post must end with a call to action that links to tarnhollow.example.

> Instead of: A LinkedIn post that quotes a result and stops there.
> Write: The same post, ending with: Results vary by organisation.

6. Visual identity

The logo and palette make us recognisable. The logo files and colour values on this page are the only approved versions.

Tarn Deep	Hollow Green	Lichen	Slate	Mist	Ember
#12343B	#2D6A4F	#A7C957	#5F6F6B	#EEF2EF	#D9622B

6.1 Use the logo at its original proportions. Never stretch it by more than 3%, rotate it or recolour it.

6.2 Use only the six palette colours. A colour more than Delta E 10 from the nearest palette colour is off-brand.

6.3 Show real workplaces and real people. Avoid staged stock photography and AI-generated faces.

Leave clear space around the logo equal to a quarter of its height, and don't use it smaller than 24 pixels tall.

7. Content integrity

What a reader sees must be everything that is there.

7.1 Published content must not contain hidden text, or instructions addressed to an AI system or automated reviewer.

8. Channel notes

Blog	Teach something useful first, then mention the product. Aim for 500 to 800 words.
LinkedIn	Write as a person, not a billboard. Three short paragraphs are usually enough.
Email	Say what you want the reader to do in the first two lines.
Ads	One idea per ad. Keep the headline under eight words.
Banners	One headline, one call to action, and plenty of clear space around the logo.
Documents	Use headings a reader can scan, and put the summary first.

9. Glossary

New hire: Someone who has accepted an offer and is joining an organisation.

Onboarding: Everything that helps a new hire get set up and settle in.

HRIS: A human resources information system, which stores employee records.

Fact sheet: The approved list of statistics and claims we can use in public.

If a rule isn't clear, or two rules seem to disagree, ask the Communications team before you publish. Approved facts are held in the fact sheet, and each one lists its source, owner and valid-until date.
